Please note that the Kosher Kiwi Directory is being continuously updated. This is a massive undertaking, with many people putting endless hours into detailing kashrut information, so that the kosher consumers are able to enjoy a range of new & existing products.

To the best of our knowledge the products listed in this Kosher Guide are correct. However, food production is ever-changing and it is an on-going task to keep up with the changes.

We will endeavour to keep our community updated with product changes as we are informed of them. These updates will be emailed to community members, and will be also be available on our web-site. www.kosherkiwirectory.co.nz

Disclaimer!

Kosher Kiwi Licensing Authority New Zealand Directory has taken every possible precaution to ensure that the Kashrut information is exact. Thus the Kosher Kiwi Licensing Authority New Zealand cannot be held responsible for any errors.

We will ensure to the best of our ability that you and the wider community are constantly informed about regular updates.

FOOD INGREDIENTS & ADDITIVES

The London Beth Din states -

INGREDIENTS

Products containing any of the ingredients listed below should not be purchased unless the product is Rabinically approved.

NON-KOSHER INGREDIENTS

Edible Fat, Edible Oil, Fish Oil

Gelatine

Glycerine & Glycerides

Polysorbates

Stearates

Diacetin & Triacetin

Casein & Caseinates

Wine Vinegar, Wine & Brandy

Shortening

Rennet

WHY ARE THE ABOVE NOT KOSHER?

Edible Fat, Edible Oil, Fish Oil

Should be avoided as one does not know the source from which they are derived.

Gelatin, Glycerine, Glycerides, Polysorbates, Stearates, Diacetin & Triacetin

May be animal derived and should be avoided.

Casein

Milk protein solids. The manufacturing process is akin to that of cheese and therefore casein is only kosher when made synthetically or under Rabbinical supervision.

Wine Vinegar, Wine & Brandy

Many ingredients of wine origin render a product non-kosher unless the product is manufactured under Rabbinical supervision. Vinegar of unspecified source may be of wine origin.

Shortening

Shortenings are cooking fats and could contain animal fats.

Rennet

Rennet is used in cheese manufacture as a clotting agent. Rennet is a concentrated extract of the rennin enzyme obtained from either calves or adult cattle.

ADDITIVES

Most processed foods nowadays contain food additives, and they are referred to according to a standardized set of EEC numbers – E numbers.

Certain E numbers may be derived from animal or vegetable sources. When present in kosher products E numbers will be of vegetable origin and approved by a rabbinical authority.

NON-KOSHER E NUMBERS

E120	E422	E432	E433	E434	E435
E436	E441	E470	E471	E472(a)	E472(b)
E472(c)	E472(d)	E472(e)	E472(f)	E473	E474
E475	E476	E477	E481	E482	E483
E491	E492	E493	E494	E495	E542
E570	E672

E120 Cochineal/Carmine

This is unique in that it is the only non-permitted colour. It is a naturally occurring red colour, which is derived from the cochineal beetle.

E422 Glycerol

Glycerol occurs naturally in many plant cells and is synthesized by the plants themselves, but it is obtained commercially from oils and fats as a by-product of the soap and fatty-acid industry. It is used as a sweetener or to reduce the effects of humidity on food.

E432 – E495 Emulsifiers & Stabilisers

These are derived commercially from fatty acids. Emulsifiers play an important role in the food industry because the manufacture of many foodstuffs involves the formation and stability of an emulsion (eg oil and water), and an emulsifier aids the mixing of these two liquids to form one complete product (eg. Mayonnaise). Stabilisers help to keep the product in a stable condition, preventing the breakdown of the emulsion.

E542 Edible Bone Phosphate

Degreased steam extract of animal bones, used in medicines as an anti-caking agent to prevent particles sticking together.

570 Stearic Acid

Naturally occurring fatty acid found in all animal fats and vegetable oils, used as an anti-caking agent, eg, in spices.

E572

Prepared synthetically from commercial stearic acid and used as an anti-caking or release agent, eg, in moulded confectionery.

A BASIC INTRODUCTION TO KOSHER EATING

The Torah gives an outline of some of the key principles of Kosher eating. No clear explanation is given for them. Certainly, they are bound up with the injunction to be a holy people following the instruction of their holy God. While it might be tempting to imagine that some health reasons underpin the Laws of Kashrut, it would be unconscionable for the Jewish world to imagine that our God would be indifferent to the health of the rest of humanity. The Rabbis of the Talmud did make some additional restrictions in the name of healthy eating. There is a prohibition against eating dangerous foods and also against talking while eating a bony fish meal!

The basic prohibitions in the Torah concern species, process and mixtures. There is also a series of laws concerning the agricultural cycle, many of which, but not all, exclusively concern produce from the land of Israel.

KOSHER SPECIES

The Bible defines Kosher beasts as those, which have a split hoof and chew the cud. Hence, cows, sheep, goats and deer are Kosher species. The pig, which has a cloven hoof, but does not chew the cud, is not. Horses, rabbits, dogs, cats, etc., are also excluded. In theory, giraffe would be Kosher; in practice it is very difficult to slaughter it painlessly in the prescribed manner.

Kosher meat must be processed appropriately (see below) and will always be clearly identified as such. Kosher meat in New Zealand can only be obtained through the Shul shop in Auckland and the Kosher Co-op, in Wellington.

FISH

The Torah defines Kosher species of fish as those that have fins and scales. There is occasionally Halachic debate over the Kashrut of a certain fish. In the majority of cases this is because two different fish share the same name in different countries. In other cases there may be a concern that the markings on the fish do not satisfy the religious requirement for scales.

Kosher species of fish may be obtained from any fishmonger. Ideally they should not be cut with knives and on boards that have been used for non-Kosher species. Where it is impossible to use Kosher knives and boards, if the fishmonger's knives and board has been wiped clean they may be used, but the fish must be washed thoroughly when it is brought home. Those scrupulous about Kashrut will scrape away at the area where the fishmonger's knife was used.

In buying Kosher fish one should ensure that the fins and scales can be seen at time of purchase. Accordingly, boned skinless fillets or steaks are not acceptable.

POULTRY

The Bible itself does not give the rule for identifying fowl. It lists a number of species of acceptable birds and prohibits others. Chicken, many ducks and geese are acceptable. Birds of prey, carrion-eaters and ostriches are not. When turkeys were introduced to Europe in the 17th century, there was substantial debate as to whether or not it fitted within the tradition. The majority of Jewish communities around the world do eat turkey. Pheasants and partridge are not considered to be Kosher. Only eggs of permitted fowl are kosher.

As with meat, Kosher fowl must be slaughtered and processed appropriately. It is only available in the Shul shops.

SWARMING THINGS

The Bible prohibits swarming creatures. This covers all insects and much aquatic life. The prohibited insects are not just the succulent ones that one might stuff with rice or serve deep-fried, but also the tiny thrips and maggots that may be found in/on many vegetables. Accordingly, there is a religious requirement to wash all vegetables and check for possible infestation. Crabs, lobsters, shrimp and shellfish are all prohibited. Snakes and reptiles are also prohibited. The eggs of non-kosher animals, i.e. snakes' eggs and sturgeon caviar may not be eaten (cod and salmon roe are, by contrast, acceptable).

PROCESS

Kosher slaughter is mandated by the Torah. It is defined within the Talmud. There is a requirement for a proficient Shochet to inspect the animal and to ensure that it is visibly healthy with no clearly broken bones or damaged organs. The Shochet uses a very sharp knife or Chalaf, which he regularly checks for nicks or imperfections. These would invalidate the knife and the slaughter.

The process is scrupulously structured to avoid pain for the animal.

The animal is checked afterwards for defects in its internal organs which would render it unfit or a treifa.

The Torah prohibits the eating of the blood of beasts or fowl. This is removed through a salting and soaking process (melicha). This must be performed within three days of the shechita before the blood has time to congeal.

The process slaughter and salting show intense sensitivity to the idea that a life is being taken. Although we do not consider animals to be on the same spiritual footing as human beings, the laws of Kashrut are more than mere technicalities. They enable us to focus on the special quality and sanctity of God's creation. Each animal is attended to: its blood removed and symbolically buried. It is a far cry from the mechanical slaughter and butchery of the non-Kosher abattoir.

PROHIBITED MIXTURES

The Torah states in three places that one should not cook a kid in its mother's milk. The Rabbis interpret the repetition as teaching three distinct lessons.

- ☆ Milk and meat (of any kosher animal) should not be cooked together.
- ☆ Where they have been combined and cooked together, they may not be eaten.
- ☆ Where they have been cooked together, no benefit may be derived from them. (Accordingly if one were to accidentally marinate a steak in yoghurt and cook it, it could not then be eaten or sold, nor even given to one's dog).

It is this injunction that to all intents and purposes gives the Kosher kitchen its unique definition. Those pots and pans and implements that will come into contact with meat (and therefore acquire a meaty flavour), are kept distinct from those that will be used in conjunction with milk.

A pot that has been used for both (together or separately) acquires and will impart a milky-meaty taste. Milky-meaty tastes are treif. Even vegetables cooked in such a pot are not Kosher.

Many Kosher kitchens will, additionally, retain a set of pareve implements. These are the boards and knives used exclusively with vegetables, fruit or fish which do not come into any contact with either milk or meat. The food prepared with pareve implements may comfortably then be used, eaten or cooked with either milky or meaty ingredients and utensils.

In many cases where a pot has accidentally been used with the wrong ingredients, all is not necessarily lost and the Rabbi of the community will advise on how to save the pot and/or the food if possible. Indeed, much of the kitchen and many utensils can be kashered. It's never too late to start.

One should clean and wash one's mouth out after milk and before eating a meat meal. The Anglo/Ashkenazi practice is to wait three hours after eating meat before dairy products are consumed. Sefardim and many Ashkenazim wait six hours.

AGRICULTURAL AND LAND OF ISRAEL PROHIBITIONS

Almost all fresh fruit, vegetables and grain can be assumed to be Kosher. There is a prohibition called "orlah" on the first three years' fruit from a tree after planting (and replanting). There is a prohibition called "chadash" on the new year's grain harvest prior to the Omer (16th Nisan). In Israel there is a prohibition on "tevel" (untithed fruit and vegetables). These present few problems here in New Zealand though you may see them referred to on the Kosher markings on Israeli pickles and wine, etc.

DERIVATIVES

As already stated, only the eggs, roe, milk etc. of kosher species are kosher.

The derivatives from non-Kosher animals are non-Kosher. Therefore, the gelatine obtained from animals which have not been properly slaughtered or the rennet in non-Kosher cheese will render what they are cooked with and what they are cooked in non-Kosher. The red food colouring cochineal is synthesised from the cochineal beetle and is therefore not Kosher. Many production processes use non-Kosher fats or wine products (see below). Even when these are not listed in the ingredients, the fact that they have been used on the production line and there has been no interim kashering, means that they have an impact on the whole product range.

Most alcohols in New Zealand are by-products of the dairy industry. To this end the majority of New Zealand alcohols and beers are actually dairy and should not be drunk with meat meals!

There are a number of dairy ingredients and derivatives used in commercial bread production in this country. To that end, many of the approved breads are dairy and should not be eaten with meat meals.

WINE

There are a number of strict Rabbinical injunctions pertaining to wine.

While there are certainly any number of non-Kosher ingredients that may be added to wine in order to improve its texture or flavour, the principle reason for the Rabbinic rulings relates to the use of wine in many pagan celebrations.

Many religious ceremonies elevate and sanctify wine. It is the basis of our Kiddush, for example. The Rabbis instructed that the wine we bless and bring to our table should have been cultivated in a spiritually appropriate environment. To that end, from the point the grapes are harvested, until the time it is poured into a glass, the wine should only be handled and processed by someone who is strictly observant. Contact or transfer by anyone else renders the wine unfit for Kosher consumption.

This does not apply to fermented grains (e.g. whisky). Nor does it apply to wines which have undergone the boiling process (or a supervised pasteurisation) rendering them "mevushal". These mevushal wines may be poured or handled by anyone. Wines which are not mevushal require special handling.

When it comes to arranging Kosher functions, it is far easier on the supervisors and the staff at the venue if mevushal wines are used.

The prohibition includes all grape juices. Grape juice is often to be found as an ingredient of canned fruits and it is for this reason that there are restrictions on which canned fruits may be purchased.

MILK AND CHEESE

The milk of Kosher animals is inherently Kosher. Chalav Yisrael is supervised milk; meaning quite literally that the milking process through to bottling has been supervised and it is known that no other milk has been added. Until very recently it was the practice of many farmers to mix different types of milk (including the milk from non-Kosher species) in order to give distinctive flavours/textures. In very many countries today, the dairy board regulations are such that this is illegal and the farmers comply with the law for fear of losing their business. It is in recognition of these strictures that many Rabbis will allow the drinking of unsupervised milk, where a supervised alternative is not readily available.

Because of substantial concerns regarding the renneting process and the use of non-Kosher rennets, there is a requirement that Kosher cheese be produced with Kosher rennet and under supervision. Vegetarian rennets are not Kosher.

PESACH

The rules of Pesach (Passover) prohibit the eating of “chametz” (leaven) from wheat, barley, oats, spelt and rye. Additionally, Ashkenazim do not eat “kitnyot” which are legumes or pulses or their derivatives. In the same way that non-Kosher flavour is absorbed by vessels from the food and then imparted when they are used again, the taste of chametz is absorbed by utensils, meaning that they need to be kashered or substituted over Pesach. The laws of Pesach are very complex (refer to the Kosher Kiwi Guide to Passover). It is for this reason that this guide which covers Kosher production for the year is not reliable for Passover.

CHECKING EGGS

While the eggs of Kosher fowl are Kosher, fertilised eggs with bloodspots are prohibited. Accordingly, eggs should be opened and checked by cracking them individually into a glass. Where a reddish bloodspot is seen in the egg it should be discarded. (The glass should be washed before new eggs are cracked into it.) White eggs pose very few problems in this regard.

It is customary when boiling eggs to boil at least three in a pot at once and not to remove them individually while they are still hot.

CHECKING VEGETABLES FOR BUGS

Different types of vegetables are susceptible to different types of infestation. Types of bug and probability of infestation vary from country to country. Where three or more bugs have been identified in any given batch of vegetable, rice etc. it is considered infested.

Broad, leafy vegetables such as lettuce and spinach should be washed and each leaf individually checked for flies and maggots.

Cauliflower and broccoli should be cut into small florets and soaked for a few minutes in water with a little salt or vinegar added in order to dislodge the bugs that lurk within. If soaked in a light opaque container, the bugs will show up clearly against the edge of the water. The florets should be removed, rinsed and individually inspected. If more than three bugs have been found in the water, the process should be repeated.

Asparagus should be dipped in slightly warm water for five minutes. It should be agitated to dislodge the thrips that are normally found within it. If no thrips are seen (they are little black or grey specks with legs), the asparagus should be rinsed and can then be cooked. If thrips are found the process should be repeated until the water is seen to be clear.

MAKING A SIMPLE KOSHER MEAL

It need not be hard to entertain Kosher guests. Mostly, they will appreciate that you have thought of them and gone to any trouble. You can serve fresh fruit straight out of any fruit bowl. Kosher biscuits can be put on any plate (preferably with a napkin or doyley underneath). Kosher crisps and nuts can be served out of any clean bowl. Kosher dips, readily available, can be served out of any clean glass bowl. It is preferable to use disposable plastic, but if served cold with clean cutlery they will be Kosher according to the most lenient authorities. Assuming the vegetable peeler is only used for vegetables, raw carrot spears, cucumber spears and celery sticks are readily made. A new knife should be used for cutting the vegetables and they should be cut onto a paper plate or a temporary covering should be put over the chopping board.

It is easy to make Kosher sandwiches for adults or kiddies' parties. Use a new or plastic knife on any New Zealand fresh butter or kosher margarine and kosher bread. There are a variety of approved cream cheeses or smoked salmons, approved jams, approved chocolate spreads and all honeys that can be used on top. Canned tuna or salmon is readily mixed with Kosher mayonnaise (a new jar should be used) and new or plastic utensils to make a simple salad.

For more adventurous cuisine many Kosher fish can readily be baked in a new aluminium foil tray with appropriately cut vegetables and seasonings applied and the whole lot fully double-wrapped in foil and baked even in a clean, but non-Kosher oven. A number of meat dishes too might be prepared a similar way. Care in all such cases should be taken to make sure that the food has only been placed on appropriate surfaces and that due precaution has been taken cutting vegetables, etc. A guest might well want to check the double wrapping. Cooked/heated foods will need to be served onto new, appropriate, Kosher crockery.

Delve into the guide and see what is available. Invite friends around. Try it once, try it twice – who knows you might pick up some spiritually rewarding habits.

Soft Drinks

- While normally The Kashrut Authority will endorse products on the basis of ingredient labels, the nature of soft drinks and our experience with them is such that all brands of carbonated/ uncarbonated soft drinks – diet or otherwise may be considered acceptable provided the following three conditions are met:
1 - They do not contain GRAPE JUICE or GRAPE JUICE FLAVOUR.
2 - They do not list as an ingredient COCHINEAL, CARMINE OR ANTHOCYANINS (I.E. COLOURING #120 OR #163), although some authorities permit #163).
3 - The sweetening agent is NOT FRUCTOSE (fruit sugar) as this may be grape derived. Phenylalanine does not pose a Kashrut problem.
- The Kashrut Authority in line with the majority opinion of Halachic authorities does not consider tartaric acid (#334) to be a non-acceptable ingredient.
- 'Health' drinks usually contain amino acids or other protein derivatives that may come from animal sources.
- Those containing ingredients with the suffix –anime or –ine should not be used unless with a reliable Hechsher or unless listed here.
- However, if the only additional ingredients to regular soft drinks in a health drink are sucrose, dextrose, dextrin, sodium chloride, potassium chloride, or various phosphates, the product is acceptable. (www.ka.org.au)

As a general rule, soft drinks, e.g. Lemonade, Lift, plain Soda Waters, Fanta, Coke, Sprite, Pepsi, Ginger Ale, Mountain Dew, Schweppes, Tonic Water etc & diet versions are acceptable providing GRAPE JUICE is NOT a flavour, or E120 (carmine) is NOT an ingredient.

Teas / Teabags / Herbal Teas

- All PURE HERBAL TEA that is plain dried herbs (e.g. camomile, rosehip) without any additives (e.g. flavours) listed in ingredients is acceptable.
- All brands of PURE TEA & TEA BAGS are acceptable provided that NO ADDITIVES are listed in the ingredients. - www.ka.org.au
- Flavoured teas may have added flavours infused into the tea leaves & therefore require Kosher approval. eg – Chai tea & Earl Grey require Kosher approval.

FISH

FISH - Fresh

ONLY FISH WITH FINS & SCALES ARE KOSHER.

Fresh fish must be recognizable as being a kosher species.

Jewish law therefore forbids the use of fillets which do not have the scaled skin attached & are not recognisable as being from a kosher species unless a rabbinic supervisor is present or the customer supervises the filleting of such fish. The supervisor should ensure that the knives and boards used are thoroughly clean before cutting commences.

Should there be any doubt as to whether the fillets or cutlets have been cut with a clean knife, then the fish must be thoroughly washed in cold water before use.

ACCEPTABLE FRESH FISH SPECIES –

Anchovy, Barracouta, Barramundi, Bass, Blue Cod, Blue Grenadier, Bonito, Bream, Butterfish, Butterfly-fish, Cardinal Fish Carp, Cod, Coral Perch, Dhufish, Duckfish, Flathead, Flounder, Garfish, Gemfish*, Goldfish, Groper, Gurnard, Haddock, Hake, Hapuka, Herring, Hoki, Jewfish, John Dory, Kahawai, Kingfish, Latchet, Lemon Sole, Luderick, Mackerel, Moonfish, Morwong, Mullet, Mulloway, Murray Cod, Murray Perch, Ocean Perch, Orange Roughy, Perch, Pike, Pilchard, Pink Ling**, Piper, Queen Fish, Red Emperor, Red Fish, Redfin, Salmon, Sardines, Sea Bass, Sea Perch, Shad, Sild, Snapper, Sole, Tailor, Tasmanian Trumpeter, Tarakihi, Trevally, Trout, Tuna (see list below), Warehou, Whiting, Wrasse, Yellowtail Kingfish

Fish - Tinned / Jars / Paste / Pickled

No tinned fish can be considered acceptable unless bearing reliable rabbinic endorsement. Some Halachic authorities do not permit the use of finely cut tinned fish which has no skin and is not recognisable as a kosher species unless packed under continuous rabbinic supervision. ka

All brands of PLAIN large chunk salmon packed in water or brine with “USA Salmon” or “Canada Salmon” clearly embossed on the can are acceptable & pareve. ka

NOTE: ONLY KOSHER APPROVED JELLIES & GELATINE MAY BE USED.

- Kosher Jellies & Gelatine available from the Greys Ave Deli.
- Pure Agar Agar is an acceptable substitute for gelatine.
- Mitoku Agar Flakes at Huckleberry.

JUICES & CORDIALS

Cordials / Concentrates

These follow the same rulings as fruit juices - read labels & ensure that they do NOT contain –

- They do not contain GRAPE JUICE or GRAPE JUICE FLAVOUR.
- They do not list as an ingredient COCHINEAL, CARMINE OR ANTHOCYANINS (I.E. COLOURING #120 OR #163), although some authorities permit #163).
- The sweetening agent is NOT FRUCTOSE (fruit sugar) as this may be grape derived. Phenylalanine does not pose a Kashrut problem.

Fruit Juice

- There are a number of fruit juices that due to new labelling laws now list Flavours as an ingredient. The Kashrut Authority is of the view that these flavours do not pose a Kashrut problem.
- All brands of 'Pure Fruit Juice' (not 'Fruit Juice Drink') are acceptable EXCEPT those containing GRAPE JUICE, GRAPE JUICE FLAVOUR or NATURAL COLOUR 120 (Cochineal) or 163 (anthocyanin - although some authorities permit anthocyanin).
- There are a number of pure fruit juices & especially TROPICAL JUICE blends that contain GRAPE JUICE OR GRAPE JUICE FLAVOURS. These are NOT KOSHER. Please read the product label carefully.
- Some Calcium enriched fruit juices contain WHEY powder. Please check ingredient listing and if whey is listed as an ingredient then those juices must be treated as DAIRY (Not Chalav Yisrael).
- Juices that contain OMEGA-3 OILS should not be used as they may contain non-kosher fish oils.
- All TOMATO JUICE must be labelled "Product of Australia" or "Made in Australia". "Packed for Australia" is NOT ACCEPTABLE. Use only products listed.
- CHILLED FRESH JUICES (in the Chiller section of supermarkets) are ACCEPTABLE, providing they do not contain any of the additives listed above.

TOOTHPASTE, DENTAL FLOSS, MOUTHWASH

- Toothpaste is not food nor is it edible & according to many authorities does not need to be kosher. Therefore while not normally recommending ingredient listing as a means of determining the Kashrut of a product, in the case of those wishing to be strict in regards to toothpaste it would be acceptable to rely on the ingredient listing.
- Current practice is that both active & inactive ingredients are now listed on toothpaste containers. The two main ingredients in toothpaste manufacture are either glycerine (glycerol) or sorbitol.
- Glycerine is usually not kosher whereas sorbitol is kosher. If glycerine is listed as an ingredient then those wishing to be strict would not use that toothpaste. However if sorbitol is the primary ingredient & glycerine is not mentioned then the product would be acceptable even for those wishing to be strict.

VEGETABLES

Vegetables - Dried

NOTE: All dried Beans, Lentils, Grains, Seeds are acceptable. London Kosher

Vegetables – Fresh

- FRESH RAW VEGETABLES are kosher but should always be thoroughly checked for worms & insects.
- GARLIC - PROCESSED PEELED GARLIC is NOT ACCEPTABLE.
- ASPARAGUS. There is a problem with insect infestation in asparagus. These insects are called "thrip". They are approximately 1-2mm long and are brown or black. They cannot be detected by simply looking at the asparagus. For instructions on how to check for them contact your local Rabbi or shomer.

Vegetables – Frozen

- All FROZEN PLAIN, UNCOOKED, RAW VEGETABLES are acceptable. They must not contain either sauces or other additives.
- PRE-COOKED, READY-TO-EAT FROZEN VEGETABLES are NOT ACCEPTABLE.
- FROZEN PLAIN POTATOES in a vegetable mix are acceptable provided oil is not listed as an ingredient.
- Only CHOPPED FROZEN SPINACH may be considered acceptable, WHOLE FROZEN SPINACH LEAVES MAY NOT BE USED due to the inevitability of insect infestation.

WARNING: NOT KOSHER -

- All Cut & Frozen Potatoes Chips or Potato French Fries, are NOT ACCEPTABLE, unless bearing a Hechsher (they are par-cooked or prepared with oils that are not acceptable).
- Pre-Cooked, Ready to Eat Frozen Vegetables are not acceptable.
- All Stir Fried Vegetables in Sauces,
- All precooked & frozen Vegetables (i.e. Asparagus).
